JUST GOSSIP ABOUT PEOPLE

Many Persons Attend Performance of "L'Amore Dei Tre Re"-Brilliant Scene, Says Nancy Wynne-Small Son Has a Reason

VERY few boxholders entertained last night, cause why? Well, most of them were busily engaged down at Palm Beach, Ormond, Belleair, St. Augustine, Augusta and goodness only knows where else down South. But bless your heart, that made very little difference in the looks of the wedding. use, for the boxes had all been given to friends or relatives, and so the gorgeously colored frocks and their accompanying jewels were as beautiful as ever on stunning-looking women.

Didn't it seem too ridiculous to see little Gladys Earle Mather in the Riddle box chaperoning Betty Eliott, who had the box for the evening? Somehow I can't believe that Gladys is really a married woman and a chaperon. She is just eighteen, you know, and is as young and fresh as a little sixteen-year-old girl. Rebecca Thomson was in that party, and so were Billie Adamson, Alfred Hunter and John Deaver, Jr.

It seems as if the girls who were eligible to come out this year, but did not on account of the war, are having even a better time than their sisters of former years, because it is a more normal good time. The former debs rushed from luncheen to tea, from tea to dinner, from dinner to theatre, from theatre to ball and from ball to bed about 6 o'clock in the morn-, ing, only to rise again for a 2 o'clock luncheon, till no wonder they looked older than their years and had to resort to massage and all kinds of aids to keep from being utterly and entirely overfatigued. Alva Sergeant and Margaretta and Barbara Benson were in the Allen box, with Mrs. Sergeant chaperoning them.

I never have seen Caruso with a grouch before. And it certainly was funny. I wonder what could have been the matter, perhaps it was a toothache, and yet I ion't think with a toothache he could have made such violent love to any one as he did to Fiera, in other words Claudia Muzio. Anyway, he would not smile.

It's an unusual opera, isn't it? I love to hear the remarks of the audience during the hectic scenes such as last night's. One small woman almost finished me by saying in the middle of the first act when Caruso and Muzio were in a most moon struck embrace, "Good night, they're both so fat they can't get their arms around each other!

Later this same lady who was evidently more taken with the acting than the singing said in loud whispers during the last set, when the heroine was laid out on the funeral bier, "Wouldn't it be funny if she went to sleep and snored out loud?" Now what are you to do with people who insist on seeing the funny side even in a funeral

DID you know the Nooksie Fotteralls have a baby? Yes, my dears, a darling little cirl, born last Sunday in Newark, N. J., where they are living. Do you remember last spring when Nux and Walter were married within two or three days of each other? Nooks married Helen Parmele, of Flushing, L. I., and as they did not come here to live Philadelphia has not heard much of them. The news of their little daughter's advent is delightful for every one to hear.

PALKING of small daughters makes one think also of small sons, and that reminds me of a small son I heard or the other day. He wasn't exactly what you ght call "in right" for several days with father. Because, you see, as son was advancing in age he began to play with other little boys, who had not been taught as carefully as he had been as to how to enswer mother upon all occasions and how to treat her, and then, too, he learned many strange words.

Well, at first father talked kindly to him when he was rude to mother and explained that he must never, never be so again. That he never could love mother enough; in fact, if he and father spent all their lives trying to make mother happy they never could thank her enough for being sweet and dear and kind to them. Son tened wisely, but next day heard some new fresh and slangy expression that was ntirely minus respect, and promptly "got It off" at mother. Father heard this, and ishment was meted out, and for several fays there was a condition of "armed neutrality" about the nursery.

Then suddenly small son smiled at ther and said, "Father, won't you buy me a rabbit for Easter?" Well, father allowed he might not, unless the rabbit wuld be given to a little boy who spoke deely to mother.

Somehow, the conversation fell flat. Son red mother very much, you see, and he ad thought he was a bit smart and had not meant to be rude, so his little heart welled quite a lot, but he could not bring imself to explain it exactly.

Three days later, just at the busiest time the day, the phone rang at the office and when father was told it was small son stopped in the midst of an important er and took up the receiver. "Father," said a small voice, "we haven't n very good friends for a few days and want to talk to you. I sort of miss king to you. Er-ar-do you think you ald get me a little rabbit for Easter?" ell, we'll talk about that tonight," said "Don't you know, old man, I'm father's busiest time? You spoke about it rabbit last time we talked together. Well, you see, father," replied the young "If you should want to scold me you'd ther away over the telephone. Y Some-I think he'll get his rabbit, because I ir he's been very loving with mother for time and as good as good can be.

KIN OF "FIGHTING BOB" ACTIVE IN WAR WORK

Wife of Commander Marsh and Her Sister Aid Sufferers

in France

Washington, March 28. The United States can never send enough ospital supplies to France." This is the natement of Charlotte Evans Marsh, daughter of Admiral Robley Evans, familiardaughter of Admiral Robley Evans, familiarly known as "Fighting Bob," and wife of Commander C. C. Marsh, United States navy. She had been working in this country for many months in behalf of the military hospitals of Avignon, in the welfare of which she is particularly interested. By giving short, informal talks on the deplorable hospital conditions in France, which she witnessed after the war began, Mrs. Marsh, through the generosity of her audiences, has been able to send about $8000 in money and $5000 worth of supplies since last May.

There are no expenses of any kind attached to this charity for salaries or rentals. Mrs. Marsh works alone, except for the help of her

Marsh works alone, except for the help of her sister, Mrs. Evans-Sewall, and the Evans home in Washington serves as a storage place until the shipping date. Every penny contributed goes directly to Avignon. There, Madame Boissiere, granddaughter of Mistral, the famous French poet, takes charge of the contributions, and the distribution is direct and impartial.

WANTS 100 WOMEN AS POLICE MATRONS

Mrs. O'Grady Voices Need of More Females to Perform Special Duties

New York, March 20. One hundred women may be added to the working forces of the Police Department if the ideas of Mrs. Ellen A. O'Grady, Fifth Deputy Police Commissioner, are to be car-ried out. Mrs. O'Grady's efforts have already resulted in the decision to appoint three addi-tional police matrons within the next few days.

Although forty-two women qualified in the civil service examinations of 1914 for the position and were placed on the eligible list which became effective that year, no matron was appointed by the last administration.

Mrs. O'Grady desires the additional women in the Police Department for work in the parks, beaches, theatres and summer resorts to give particular attention to women and Several prominent women, after investiseveral prominent women, after investigating conditions, brought the matter to the attention of Mrs. O'Grady. They found that in many districts which needed matrons not a single police precinct had one. and promises that this will be one of the finest yet given by the institute.

An orchestra has been engaged to provide the music in the dance hall, while a string band will entertain in the cafe. It may be of interest to note that not only does the Jewish Consumptive Institute treat tubercular persons, but it also conducts a campaign among the poorer class of people, teaching them how to prevent the spread of the dis-ease. In the last year the institute has irreated 2974 patients at the clinics at 495 Wharton street, and sixty-three patients were maintained at the expense of the institute at the Eaglesville Sanatorium. There were 45.969 quarts of milk distributed free of charge to the poor consumptives and 75.24 prescriptions of medicine were filled free. The proceeds of this affair will be used for the purpose of continuing the good work, and a part of it will be set aside on account of the extraordinary increase in demand for the treatment of unfortunate tubercular pa-
